I know this is short notice but I thought it would be a great way to let you know we're still looking for people. Feel free to contact me directly if you have any questions. This is a free program that can be used to generate a huge number of random, unique strings in bulk. These strings can be saved as files for safekeeping, or, if that's not possible, you can copy them to the clipboard so they can be easily pasted into other applications.

Features: Free Delivers many random data types Stores the data you generate in both a file for long-term storage and in the clipboard so you can easily copy and paste the numbers to other applications Will not overwrite files or alter your computer settings Compatible with Windows XP, Vista and Windows 7 How to Use: When you start the program for the first time, it will present you with a wizard where you can select the data types you want the program to generate. You can select from several types including Binary, Octal, Decimal and Hexadecimal numbers. There are two fields for entering the length of each value. For example, if you have one Binary number with four 8-bit groups, you would enter 4. The rest of the fields are self-explanatory. You can indicate the number of random items you want to generate (as opposed to the number of data you want generated), the number of each string you want generated, and the number of characters you want included. When you choose a value, a random string will be generated. You can also choose to use the default values by clicking the "Use Default" button. You can copy the generated data to the clipboard to paste into other applications, or you can save it as a text file on your computer. Before you save the random data, you can choose to run the checksum utility, to verify the data is correct.
